VENETA'S OUR DAILY BREAD RESTAURANT OFFERS COUNTRY-STYLE CULINARY OPTIONS By William Kennedy

Living in Lane County can be a charming mix of city culture and country life. For example, a short drive west from the city of Eugene is Our Daily Bread Restaurant in Veneta. Located in a renovated '40s-era church, Our Daily Bread is a full-service restaurant offering home-style comfort with a fine dining twist.

The vintage atmosphere of the church offers intriguing nooks for intimate conversation or open space for a family-style, communal experience. You may even chat with a server who attended the church as a young girl.

"Originally it was Northwest cuisine," Our Daily Bread co-owner Catharine Perkins tells EW. Perkins, alongside her husband and chef Tim Perkins, started Our Daily Bread Restaurant in 2006 after purchasing the popular Veneta landmark, Our Daily Bread Bakery.

"What happened is we went with what people liked. People came in and they wanted a Cobb salad," Perkins says, explaining the restaurant's expansive menu balances comfort and familiarity (Reuben sandwiches and onion rings) alongside higher-end items like New York steak Rémy Martin and lobster.

Perkins says Our Daily Bread makes everything fresh and from scratch in a GMO-free kitchen where almost all meats and ingredients are sourced locally. The restaurant offers a full bar and a wide selection of local wines.

"We thought dinner would do the best business," Perkins recalls. Since Veneta is a bedroom community to Eugene-Springfield, "we thought we were going to get people on the way home from work. But that wasn't the case."

Instead, Perkins says, Our Daily Bread does brisk breakfast business with retirees and tourists on their way to and from the coast, or in the area sampling local wineries.

Perkins says the most popular breakfast items are the French toast or the hearty, big-appetite McKenzie omelet (stuffed with mushrooms, onions, bacon, tomato and cheddar cheese and served with avocado and black olives, salsa and sour cream upon request). The omelet pairs well with Our Daily Bread's tasty Bloody Mary.

The chicken curry salad is a popular lunch pick (fresh mixed greens tossed with chicken apples, red onions, dried cranberries, red peppers, a light amount of curry, seasonings, mayo, cashews and coconut). The salad is served both in full and half portions.

Perkins says fish 'n' chips and "Our Daily Reuben" are also popular for lunch, featuring pastrami roasted in a hoppy Oregon microbrew. Perkins boasts playfully that many stop by Our Daily Bread for fish on their way to the coast.

For dinner, Perkins picks the chicken McKenzie, which features chicken breast stuffed with dried cranberries, hazelnuts, spinach and feta cheese roasted to a golden brown; it's served with wild rice and seasonal vegetables topped with white wine Beurre Blanc.

"As you can hear," Perkins says, "we have a Northwest theme." Our Daily Bread also offers fresh-roasted prime rib as a Friday night special, and the menu includes vegetarian options.

Perkins is quick to mention her appreciation for the overwhelming support Our Daily Bread receives from Veneta locals. "We couldn't do it without them," she says.

So whether for date night, a family affair or just a change of pace from Eugene's increasingly busy downtown restaurants, take a short drive out to Veneta. ■

Our Daily Bread is located at 88170 Territorial Rd. in Veneta and is open 8 am to 3 pm Monday through Tuesday and 8 am to 8 pm Wednesday through Sunday. See more at ourdailybreadrestaurant.com.

NEW RESTAURANT OPENS UP IN LEGENDARY WHITEAKER DIVE By Rick Levin

Tiny Tavern is dead. Long live Tiny Tavern. With the protracted death rattle and final expiring sigh of the Whiteaker's seediest bar now just another piece of Eugene folk history, the question "what will become of Tiny's?" has at last been answered: It will be a restaurant, of course.

In fact, the former tavern at Blair and 4th is an eatery already, called Board (more on that in a sec), which celebrated a surprise soft opening Aug. 1 during the Whiteaker Block Party. The place was packed — with hob-nobs of the jet set, preening foodies, drunken scene-hoppers and not a few stumbling crusties drawn like zombies to a familiar place to score.

Nope, no more goodies here, hophead; it's all above Board, as it were. Sitting down at the table during the block party, the first thing I notice was: no saltshaker, just a pepper mill. Ballsy move, one that says, "we know what we're doing."

Also, the place is gorgeously revamped from its previously ramshackle condition; especially nice is the copper-topped bar, which blends nicely with the warm, woody atmosphere of the place.

And the food was good, some of it very good — outstanding were the pork belly Reuben and the duck confit with a scrumptious tart cherry mustard made from scratch, not to mention the perfectly done pork brisket.

Co-owner and co-chef Michael Autrey describes the cuisine at Board as "elevated comfort food" — small, artisanal plates served mostly on cutting board (hence the name) for a warm, down-home feel. "A big concept of Board is you can come in and get three or four small plates priced anywhere from $3 to $12," he says.

CO-OWNER AND CO-CHEF

A Texas native who, despite a degree in engineering, has always pursued his love of food, Autrey was the head chef at Agate Alley and worked at Laboratory before deciding to open his own place. Crucial to the inception of Board was his wife, 4J math teacher Courtney Stitt — who is responsible for much of the restaurant's lovely décor — as well as Autrey's co-chef, Pierce Kieffer.

"I've seen a lot in this town," Kieffer says, "and I feel like in Eugene you approach food with a low ego and high standards, and you can please anyone with that. There's a lot of pretentious people around and a lot of cool people around, and we try to meet in the middle."

Autrey says that the collaboration between himself and Kieffer is crucial, as the two chefs play off each other's strengths, blending classical training and influences of New World cuisine. The focus, they say, will be local with a twist. "The menu is going to change a lot more rapidly than just the seasons," Autrey says. "We definitely want to push the envelope, but also at the same time there are a lot of people who do want a grilled cheese. I want to provide a place where everybody can get what they want."

Although for many the demise of Tiny's is a sentimental punch in the guts, especially to hood rats nostalgic for the Felony Flats era of the Whit, Autrey has honored the tavern by keeping the Tiny Tavern sign on the beer taps. He also plans on opening a patio that features the big yellow-and-green Tiny Tavern sign, along with future plans for offering deck dining upstairs.

"The opportunity to take an old farm house from the 1890s that was in complete disrepair and bring it back to its former glory was a majority of the appeal," Autrey explains. "To breathe life back into it was really what we were going for." ■

Board is at 394 Blair Blvd.; call 343-3023 for more info.

DUCK CONFIT

Irish Gem

SMALL PUB BRIMS WITH PATRONS By Sydney Zuelke

Walking through the dense, cherry-wood front door of The Pint Pot Public House, you're greeted by many things: the sound of bagpipes, the smell of hearty spices, snug armchairs in dimly lit corners, stacks of board games and smiles from welcoming strangers.

Immediately, your eyes are drawn to writing in chalk atop the bar: "May your home always be too small to hold all your friends." And while The Pint Pot may be small, its collection of patrons is brimming.

"You wouldn't realize how much of a following there is for Scottish and Irish heritage in Eugene, but it's huge," owner Barbie Walker tells EW.

And the loyalty is apparent — just look up. Dozens of silver mugs hang from the ceiling, engraved with the names of the pub's regulars. It's part of the "Mug Club," a not-so-secret society of sorts. For an annual fee, patrons can receive a personalized mug and heaps of benefits, including happy hour every day and free first fills.

It wasn't exactly easy creating a space where people can feel at home. Walker and her husband Justin, also co-owners of The Webfoot, have owned the pub since June 2014, transforming the building's tornado of red-and-white checkers as a former hot dog shop on the corner of 17th and Pearl into the warm and inviting public house it is today.

Justin Walker, who comes from both Irish and Scottish backgrounds, made it a priority to keep the pub authentic, even filling it with artifacts from his grandfather's house.

There aren't any garden salads or vegan burgers here, just good ol' traditional Irish grub. The Pint Pot's meat is all locally sourced from Long's Meat Market, and the soda bread from local nonprofit Reality Kitchen. The Walkers say they pride themselves on simple, clean yet bold flavors, with dishes incorporating carrots, peas, lamb, beef, chunks of potatoes and bangers — each with a different spice or twist to it.

When it comes to drinking (as the Irish are known to do now and again) it's even more important to stay true to the mission.

"It's all traditional Irish and Scottish, and we're not going to stray from that. We had people stop in when we first opened and ask for an IPA — it's the big craze, you know, very hip to have all these IPAs. I would say, 'No, but we've got this beautiful Belhaven. It's on nitro, and you're gonna love it!'" Barbie Walker laughs.

The pub is unwavering on imported beers, though it carries 56 different kinds of whiskey (or whisky) from the highlands and lowlands, while offering just a few options when it comes to vodka or gin. They make their ginger ale in house, with a prominently original, fierier flavor. Plop in a giant, hand-molded circular ice ball and you've got yourself not just a delicious drink, but also an experience.

"You can go anywhere to get beer and wine and liquor, but you're not going to find those small-town intricacies in other bars," Barbie Walker says. "It's a place to come and solve the day, sing and laugh and cheer to old friends." ■

The Pint Pot is at 195 E. 17th Ave. and is open 11 am to 2 am daily. See The Pint Pot's Facebook page for more info.

To Bake Is Human; To Cupcake, Divine

THE DIVINE CUPCAKE'S NEW OWNERS CARRY ON A SWEET TRADITION By Andy Valentine

When Aaron and Mariah Kastrava acquired The Divine Cupcake in early May, they were ready for a challenge. Previously, the married couple had planned to open a coffee house, but when an opportunity for something sweeter arrived, they went all in.

After closing its store in west Eugene in 2012, The Divine Cupcake (which existed for nine years under previous ownership) operated principally as an online business, and the Kastravas understood this going in.

What they didn't anticipate was that, following appearances at several local events (including this year's Oregon Country Fair), demand for their bouncy, vegan delicacies would skyrocket.

Three months later, they were cutting the ribbon on a new retail shop in Springfield.

"We had to get the storefront because it was way too busy," says Mariah Kastrava, who graduated from the University of Oregon earlier this year. "We had too many orders to be running out of our kitchen — my kitchen was a disaster all the time."

It's exciting news for any entrepreneur. But let's step back to the part that made this bakery famous: The Divine Cupcake serves, and has always served, primarily vegan fare. For those born under rocks (or slabs of beef) this means its cupcakes contain zero animal products.

Wait, how does one bake a cupcake without eggs, milk and butter? Answer: Who cares? Truth is, you'd never know the difference.

"We didn't [stay vegan] because Divine Cupcake did it before us," Mariah Kastrava explains. "We kept it this way because it's so freaking good."

Picture, if you will, languid crests of lavender frosting, ooey-goey splotches of choco-filled fantasy, Oregon blueberries turgid with juice. Now team those with the smoothest, bounciest, brightest cupcakes you can imagine. If that doesn't do it for you, make an appointment with a taste specialist.

Vegan shtick aside, the new owners are following other traditions that made Divine Cupcake great. All their ingredients are locally sourced, organic, fair-trade, non-GMO, gluten-conscious, etc.

As Creswell natives, the Kastravas say they hold Northwest values in high regard, and supporting local business is a big part of that.

Aaron Kastrava explains that most of their ingredients come from locally owned stores, including Friendly St. Market, as well as farms like Royal Blue and GloryBee (yes, they are well aware that honey isn't vegan; they have standard cupcakes, too). Even the syrups for their specialty drinks are bought in Portland, and they only serve Café Mam coffee.

It's all about keeping quality high. As for the future, the Kastravas say they hope to continue their rate of growth and allow the business to move organically. So far, they're on the right track.

As Mariah Kastrava puts it, they want to expand and do new things. At the same time, though, they're keeping the values that birthed Divine Cupcake intact. For that, we salute them. ■

The Divine Cupcake is located at 388 Q Street in Springfield and is open 10 am to 8 pm Monday through Thursday, 10 am to 9 pm Friday and Saturday and 10 am to 7 pm Sunday. For more information on custom orders and event catering, visit divinecupcake.com.

MAMÁ MAYRA'S KITCHEN
SERVES UP MEXICAN CUISINE
FROM THE HEART By Ben Ricker

Hands wrist-deep in masa harina, Mayra Medina thinks back to when she was little and her mother worked in a cramped kitchen behind a tiny eatery in Morelia, the city in central Mexico where Medina grew up. The modest comedor was so small it didn't even warrant a name. Though the place was a lonely hole in the wall, Medina's mother cooked with the same ardor she applied to preparing meals for her family at home.

After Medina's mom took over the kitchen, more customers lined up every day. The nameless comedor fast became the barrio's favorite, Medina says.

Mamá Mayra's Kitchen, the sunny orange food truck parked on the empty lot at the corner of West 11th Avenue and Grant Alley, is in many ways Medina's tribute to her mother. Six days a week, Medina serves traditional Mexican food (as well as burritos) from a kitchen very much like the one she remembers from her childhood.

Like many restaurants in Eugene, Mamá Mayra's pledges to use local and organic ingredients whenever possible. Where recipes call for animal fat, Medina substitutes coconut and olive oils. But ingredients tell only half the story.

The second half she learned watching her mother. It's simple, Medina says: Cook at work as you would at home.

Tortilla chips pulled fresh out of boiling hot oil seem to bite back with a rewarding crunch. Instead of ladling guacamole from a premade vat, Medina halves an avocado and mashes it to paste with a tablespoon before squeezing lime over it and stirring in fresh-cut cilantro, chopped onion and tomato. Her tacos al pastor, served on handmade tortillas, light up your parietal lobe with their citric tang.

MAYRA'S LIFE-

It isn't pastor without pineapple, Medina says.

Barely audible ranchera songs float from somewhere inside the repurposed trailer to tickle the back of your head. Flowers, lawn ornaments and hanging cacti add cheer to the somewhat ruined terrain.

Scrawled on the back of the menu, a message from Medina herself reads: "Queremos que se sienta como en casa y le pedimos su paciencia cuando estamos preparando su orden." (We hope you to feel at home here and we ask your patience as we prepare your meal.)

Any dish can be made to order. Every meal Medina serves up is one of a kind. Try the same dish twice, on the same ticket even, and the two plates still won't taste quite the same, suggesting the recipes from which she works are more intuited than scripted.

Medina's place has character, which helps underpin the sneaking suspicion that you're a guest in her home, eating food she's proud to serve you, her friend. ■

Mamá Mayra's Kitchen, at 1845 W. 11th Ave., is open weekdays 10:30 am to 6:30 pm and noon to 7 pm Saturday. See its Facebook page for more info.

TEA BAR SERVES AUTHENTIC BUBBLE TEA

AND TRADITIONAL CHINESE TEAS By Amy Schneider

Bubble tea is the coffee of Taiwan. That's why Shuang Han and Crystal Zhao, owners of The Rabbit Hole Tea Bar, decided to open shop last year and bring the authentic Taiwanese bubble tea experience, as well as other kinds of tea, to Eugene. Real bubble tea is a rarity in the U.S., they say.

"You see a lot of restaurants have bubble tea, but it's totally different than what good bubble tea is," Han explains. "The main thing is we use real tea, not water and powder. It takes a certain technique."

For the uninitiated, bubble tea is a drink invented in Taiwan that features sweet, milky tea with large tapioca pearls called boba that sit at the bottom of the cup. Giant straws, a signature of bubble tea, allow the drinker to slurp up the chewy boba while savoring the distinctive flavor of the tea.

"There's no way I can explain what bubble tea tastes like because it's just such a unique flavor," Zhao says. "You have to try it. It's our signature thing."

Han and Zhao, both from China, opened their tea bar almost a year ago — they graduated from the University of Oregon with business degrees and decided to put their degrees to use as purveyors of Chinese and Taiwanese teas.

Secreted away near Brails and Safeway, the tea bar is a cozy nook with wood countertops, ample seating and a warm atmosphere.

Rabbit Hole offers a wonderfully rich menu, with a selection of traditional Chinese teas served in dainty cups. The Dragon Well green tea tastes earthy and familiar, especially when taken in small sips.

Teas with a Western bent include Earl Gray and raspberry black, offered hot, iced or blended. Han and Zhao say each drink is made to order, and customers can choose how much sugar and ice they want.

Rabbit Hole also provides toppings outside the realm of boba — red beans, egg pudding and coffee jelly are all on the table.

Zhao says that when she and Han constructed the menu, they chose to offer familiar Western drinks as well as teas that invite Eugeneans to experience new flavors. They special order ingredients from Taiwan to ensure an authentic taste.

In addition to being a "rabbit hole" or hideaway for tea lovers, Rabbit Hole is named after Han's rabbit, Jake. With adorable black-and-white markings, Jake features in the tea bar's logo.

To celebrate a full year of business this September, Zhao and Han say they plan to offer a rewards program, change up the menu and perhaps throw a party. And who knows, Han says — maybe Jake the rabbit will make a special appearance. ■

The Rabbit Hole Tea Bar is at 240 E. 17th Ave. and is open 1 to 6 pm during the summer, with extended hours in the winter. See its Facebook page for more info.

NEW FOOD TRUCK COMBINES A BREAKFAST CLASSIC WITH ICE CREAM

By Amy Schneider

Cori Haines-Tutrone and her family took a leap of faith when they decided to switch their business from coffee to waffles and ice cream. For years, she ran Aroma Café out of the Gateway Mall, but after the mall underwent remodeling, Haines-Tutrone and her family chose to move on to creamier, more waffle-y pastures — in this case, a food truck called I Scream for Waffles.

“We really didn’t want to be under the thumb of a big corporate leasing office in another state and dumping tons of money into a corporation,” Haines-Tutrone says. “So we just pooled all our resources and used our past experience to venture out on our own, to be part of the local economy.”

The waffle truck, painted a cheerful turquoise, is a repurposed Frito Lay truck, which Haines-Tutrone says came complete with leftover chip bags in bins. Haines-Tutrone and her business partner, Drew Main (who also happens to be her daughter), launched the food truck in March at the Evergreen Tattoo Invitational. Business has boomed since.

The sugar-rich sweetness of liège waffles paired with decadent, house-made ice cream evokes the flavors of summer, but Haines-Tutrone says that waffles are a diverse medium that can match any season.

“We didn’t want to be locked into just liège waffles and ice cream,” she says, “so we structured the menu for flexibility. We do waffle fries and waffle burgers, and chicken waffle cones are super popular.”

Besides the fact that fried chicken and waffles is perhaps one of the most divine food creations to grace the world, chicken waffle cones filled with mashed potatoes make easy, portable meals, perfect for festivals and other events, Haines-Tutrone says.

“We are constantly recipe testing,” Haines-Tutrone says, adding that a few menu items in the works include bacon mac ‘n’ cheese waffle cones and Caesar salad waffle cones.

Harkening back to her coffee origins, Haines-Tutrone says the food truck will soon serve nitro coffee, a smooth, creamy take on cold brew — think the consistency of Guinness, but with coffee instead of beer.

Haines-Tutrone says I Scream for Waffles sources many of its ingredients locally and tries to be “as eco-friendly” as possible, using compostable plates and recyclable materials.

With the added mobility of a truck, Haines-Tutrone’s business has operated at a handful of Eugene-Springfield venues, including Lane United games, beergarden., Ninkasi and wineries. She will bring her truck to Faerieworlds at Horning’s Hideout in Portland this September, where she’ll serve “faerie waffles” with edible glitter and whipped cream.

Haines-Tutrone says the transition from mall kiosk to food truck has been challenging, but she appreciates the welcome she and her family have received from the local food truck community.

“It’s just a really tight-knit group of the hardest working people I’ve ever met,” she says. “It’s been awesome. Everybody networks together, and it’s a supportive community that’s amazing to work with.” ■

I Scream for Waffles’ locations and hours vary; follow its Facebook page or find them on the Eugene Street Food app for more info.

Word is

Oregon lettuce in space! When NASA scientists chose a type of lettuce to grow on the International Space Station, they went with Outredgeous, a red romaine leafy green variety developed by Wild Garden Seed in Philomath, Oregon. The space-grown lettuce tastes “awesome,” according to NASA astronauts who sampled the lettuce in early August. And really, what else would you expect of Oregon-bred produce? Order your own organic Outredgeous seed at wildgardenseed.com.
